

ANAT GOURJI

Anat Gourji will become chief financial officer and head of the Corporate Group at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York in October 2024. She will also be a member of the Bank's Executive Committee.

In her role, Gourji will direct and coordinate the Corporate Group's activities and actively participate in developing the New York Fed's broader strategic efforts. She will be responsible for financial management, procurement, real estate, and other enterprise support functions across the institution. She will also partner closely with her peers across the Federal Reserve System's Advisory Group for Financial Management and Financial Support Office.

Throughout her career at the New York Fed, Gourji has advanced into increasingly senior positions in the Technology Group. She is currently the chief operating officer in the Technology Group, a position she has held since 2013. In this role, she successfully oversees the New York Fed's business technology, partners with National IT and other Reserve Banks to contribute to industry-wide best practices, and effectively manages a significant operating budget.

Prior to this role, among other positions, Gourji led a technology engineering team that built innovative technology platforms for the New York Fed and new capabilities to meet customers' needs. She began her career as a System Analyst in the New York Fed's Customer Support Center in 1997.

Gourji holds a bachelor's degree in computer science from Queens College, which is part of the City University of New York system.
